The Restore 22 Coffee Shop in Coraopolis held its grand opening Nov, 14, with the promise of supporting veterans after their service.

Veterans, families and members of the public crowded into Restore 22’s renovated center on Fourth Avenue for coffee and pastries at the grand opening and ribbon-cutting.

Its name refers to the average of 22 veterans who commit suicide every day as the result of PTSD (Post Traumatic Stress Disorder) suffered during their tours of duty. The coffee shop is open to anyone during its operating hours Wednesday through Saturdays, but veterans can also gain access to “resources that can enhance their quality of life,” according to restore22.org.

The coffee shop also includes a conference room and rooms for counseling

Trump’s tariffs taking toll on cheese trade

Michael Collins
USA TODAY

GREENSBORO, VT – On Mateo Kehler’s family farm, at the end of a dirt road about an hour from the Canadian border, the cheesemaking starts before darkness lifts over the pastures and pines of northern Vermont.

A truck with fresh milk from cows that graze in nearby fields rumbles toward Jasper Hill Farm’s big blue barn, painted with a mural of a starry nighttime sky and a blue-cheese moon. An American flag stretches over the entrance.

Two hours to the north, in a small, leafy, French-speaking village, Jean Morin steps into the former Catholic church he bought for 1 Canadian dollar and turned into part of his cheese factory. The pungent smell of aging cheese fills a temperature-controlled room as Morin surveys shelves holding hundreds of wheels of the fromage he

Gloria is sweet, shy girl looking for safe new home

Beaver County Times
USA TODAY NETWORK

Hello there! My name is Gloria, and I’m a 6-year-old brown tabby and white girl who’s hoping you’ll give me a chance to show you just how special I am.

I’ll admit, I’m a little shy when meeting new people. New faces and unfamiliar surroundings can make me nervous, so I may need a little time to feel comfortable. But underneath that shy exterior is a very sweet, loving girl who just wants to feel safe. Once I get to know you, my affectionate side starts to shine! I love receiving pets, curling up in a cozy lap, and sharing
