not to desert its allies. A day after announcing the Iran war ceasefire, Trump took to social media to warn the country that if the "REAL AGREEMENT" was not complied with, all U.S. military assets would remain in place ready for a military response. Clarke Central High School will host a unique program this summer that is expected to attract about 500 student-athletes, along with coaches and librarians. The Summer Book Club expanded from what officials described as a "football-centric pilot" program to one that includes students also participating in flag football, softball, cross country, varsity basketball, volleyball, cheerleading, marching band, and the Junior ROTC program, according to the school district. The district reported the program was a collaboration between Clarke Central assistant head football coach Damien Gary and the school media specialists Angie Pendley and Naomi Craver.

Wayne Ford Athens Banner-Herald USA TODAY NETWORK

The Jam For Cam fundraiser held in downtown Athens on March 31 raised $1.2 million for skin cancer research, the nonprofit organization Jam in the Streets has announced. The event hosted by the Athens-based Jam in the Streets featured 19 musical performances across seven stages, headlined by Goose, a four-man rock band from New Hampshire that has performed at venues across the nation. Jam in the Streets officials reported that the festival this year honored Cameron Fearon, a University of Georgia student from Atlanta who died in 2018 at age 19 from metastatic melanoma.
