The fourth annual Walk, Run, Read benefit for the Literacy Project of North Idaho will be Saturday at Coeur d'Alene City Park.

The 10K starts at 8 a.m., the 5K and 1 mile at 8:30 a.m. and the Kids Dash for children 7-12 at 9:15 a.m., with registration for kids 6 and younger at 9 a.m. All races will begin in the park and will follow the North Idaho Centennial Trail toward Post Falls.

This family-friendly event will feature a book swap and sale — bring books to trade or grab a new one for $1 — as well as games, activities, jump houses and vendors.

The Literacy Project of North Idaho is a volunteer-driven nonprofit dedicated to helping adults in the community improve their literacy and English skills.

President Bill Reagan's voice was evident Friday as he gave an update on the Sherman Tower project.

Eight hundred cubic yards of concrete were poured in one day to create the second floor of Hagadone Hospitality's newest venture.

It marked the largest concrete pour of the entire project, as the second floor will extend off both sides of the building to accommodate the hotel's restaurant and rooftop bar.

"This is the toughest part right here," Reagan said.

Cd'A reaches tentative deals with police, LCEA

General fund cost estimated at $650K

A contract between the city of Coeur d'Alene and the Police Officer Association is expected to be considered by the City Council on Tuesday.

City Attorney Randy Adams said a tentative agreement was reached last Tuesday.

A tentative agreement between the Lake City Employees Association and the city is also scheduled to go before the City Council the same evening.

The deal with the police is a one-year extension of the existing agreement, Adams said. It includes a 3.5% market adjustment to wages for all members. In addition, officers who promote to sergeant or lieutenant will receive a 10% wage increase or be placed at the minimum of the rank, whichever is greater.

HAYDEN — As Hayden Lake Watershed Association's president emeritus Geoff Harvey presented the group's new kiosk at Honeysuckle Beach, he invited those in attendance to "take a look out at the lake."

The water was calm, reflecting the clear late-summer sky. A few families dotted the shoreline.

"Our water quality is equal to the best in North Idaho," Harvey said. "A lot of people did HAYDEN — Cutting, stacking, and transporting over 60 cords of firewood is no easy task.

But around 100 volunteers were up to the challenge Saturday.

Several organizations came together for the benefit of ElderHelp of North Idaho, an organization that delivers firewood to seniors and families that rely on wood heat in the winter in Kootenai County.
