Beyond boredom with board games

Maren Haarlow celebrates a victory while playing the board game Hidden Desert during the Monroe School Board Game Club after school Feb. 24. The club meets for 10 weeks focusing on skills such as teamwork, communication, winning, losing and others. Students play under the direction of fifth-grade teacher Matt Oldenburg. "Games are also great for higher-order thinking skills like analyzing, strategic thinking, negotiation and future planning," he said. We have a great time." Please turn to page 30 for more pictures.
