Cottonmouth or copperhead?

Here’s how to tell the difference in Louisiana

Presley Bo Tyler Shreveport Times | USA TODAY NETWORK

When you’re out in the woods or on the water, properly identifying snakes can mean the difference between a safe encounter and a deadly one. • Louisiana is home to 48 species of snake, but only seven are venomous, two of which are copperheads and cottonmouths. • It can be hard to identify snakes, but knowing which characteristics to look for can make identification easier.

What’s the difference between a copperhead and a cottonmouth?

Copperheads and cottonmouths are both found in the southern U.S. and are both venomous pit vipers, but differences lie in their habitat and appearance.

Cottonmouths are typically found in wet regions like swamps, marshes, rivers and lakes. This can make them easily mistaken for water snakes. Copperheads are often found in rocky areas, such as mountains, woods, suburban wood piles

When will Buc-ee’s open in Louisiana?

Presley Bo Tyler Shreveport Times USA TODAY NETWORK

Buc-ee’s, with its beloved beaver mascot and celebrated food items, will soon open its first ever locations in Louisiana. The chain of massive travel centers is expanding into other states and will be opening one location in Northeast Louisiana and another in the South Central region of the state. The stores are expected to generate millions in revenue, employ hundreds of workers and welcome thousands of visitors daily.

When is Buc-ee’s location in Ruston, Louisiana expected to open?

Construction crews have begun pouring concrete and laying additional groundwork for the Buc-ee’s building in Ruston, which will be located off of Interstate 20 at the Tarbutton road exit. Ruston’s Buc-ee’s location is projected to open mid 2027, but this could be subject to change depending on construction progress, according to the City of Ruston. Once completed, the location will span more than 70,000 square feet and include more than 100 fuel pumps.
