San Juan County challenges state gaming board decision

Petition seeks to overturn vote allowing SunRay to move to Clovis

BY STEVEN BORTSTEIN

AZTEC – San Juan County officials are doubling down on their opposition to a recent state-level ruling, voting to formally request a judicial review of a New Mexico Gaming Control Board decision regarding the future of SunRay Park and Casino in Farmington.

The Board of County Commissioners authorized staff to file a motion for reconsideration, signaling a growing rift between local leaders and state regulators over gaming oversight and its economic impact on the region.

The request for a formal review comes less than a week after the New Mexico Racing Commission unanimously approved SunRay Park's request to move its racino to Clovis, a site nearly 400 miles away.

The commission's vote came during a special meeting after months of public discussion. San Juan County, the city of Farmington and Zia Park in
