Legislators honor first responders

Several emergency responders whose actions in May saved the life of a Steuben County resident following a cardiac arrest were recently honored by the Steuben County Public Safety & Corrections Committee.

Steuben County Public Safety Director Timothy Marshall and EMS Coordinator Brandon Rosettie presented commendations to the emergency responders whose seamless teamwork on May 16 resulted in a remarkable outcome.

At approximately 3:26 a.m. May 16, the Steuben County 911 Center received a report of an unconscious patient, Marshall said. Within moments, 911 telecommunicators recognized the severity of the emergency, dispatched the appropriate resources, and began providing lifesaving CPR instructions.

Marshall said what followed was a demonstration of the strength of Steuben County's emergency response system.

From the initial 911 call through law enforcement response, emergency medical care, air medical transport, and hospital treatment, every link in the chain of survival worked together to give the best possible chance of recovery.

"This is how a 911 system is supposed to work," Marshall said. "From the patients family member making that first call, to our 911 dispatchers providing CPR instructions, the responding police officers, EMS personnel, paramedics, LifeNet crew, and the hospital staff, everyone performed their role with incredible professionalism. It truly was a team effort that saved a life."

Marshall said according to the American Heart Association, survival from an out-of-hospital cardiac arrest with full neurological recovery occurs in only approximately 4 to 9 percent of cases, making the patients recovery especially meaningful.

Those recognized by the county for their outstanding service:

- Steuben County EMS: Paramedic Jackie Lewis
- Bath Police Department: Sgt. Dustin Johnson and Officer Michael Harrington
- Steuben County 911 Communications: Brady Hill,
