

Breast Cancer Awareness Month

Some Pictures Are Too Important to Miss

If you grew up taking photos with a disposable camera, you may be the right age to make an important appointment: your mammogram.

 GUTHRIE

Schedule your mammogram this Breast Cancer Awareness Month with Guthrie by scanning the QR code, visiting Guthrie.org/Mammogram or calling 866-GUTHRIE (866-488-4743).

PRESS & SUN-BULLETIN

PRESSCONNECTS.COM | THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 2026 | BINGHAMTON, N.Y.

PART OF THE USA TODAY NETWORK

Cornell orders review of Jane Doe case, policies

Several thousand students, faculty, and community members attended a rally at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y. Oct. 5. The protestors gathered to demand change from Cornell's administration after the handling of the Jane Doe sexual abuse allegations. PHOTOS BY SETH HARRISON/THE JOURNAL NEWS

Jillian McCarthy
Ithaca Journal
USA TODAY NETWORK

A Cornell University committee has retained an attorney to conduct an independent review of how the school prevents and responds to sexual misconduct on campus.

A newly formed Special Committee of the Cornell University Board of Trustees announced the decision on Oct. 6 in the midst of widespread student protests calling for administrative accountability after a former Cornell University student known anonymously as Jane Doe filed a lawsuit against the university and seven former fraternity members.

The 20-year-old woman has alleged she was gang-raped by members of Cornell's Chi Phi fraternity on Oct. 19, 2024, after being pressured into taking ketamine and being too intoxicated to

See REVIEW, Page 6A

Blakeman, Lawler blast NY limit on ICE help

Chris McKenna
New York State Team
USA TODAY NETWORK

CHAPPAQUA — Rep. Mike Lawler joined gubernatorial candidate Bruce Blakeman and other campaigning Republicans to condemn New York's new limit on police cooperation with immigration enforcement and spotlight two recent arrests in Westchester and Putnam counties.

A line of speakers took turns delivering often fiery comments at a press conference on Tuesday, Oct. 6, outside the New Castle Town Hall and court, where one of the suspects was arraigned last week.

The focus of their ire was a state law enacted this year that prohibits local police and jails from entering into formal cooperation agreements with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement.

Such pacts were rare in New York compared to in other states, but their ban has become another flashpoint in the heated partisan clash over ICE in the midst of the Trump administration's mass deportation push.

"Sanctuary policies are a disaster for our country," Lawler said. "They should be prohibited. And I support legislation at the federal level to do that."

He pointed to last week's arrests of two men said to be living illegally in the U.S. after previously being deported.

One was Diego Rodriguez-Ordenez, 24, who was arrested in Kent on Sept.

See ICE, Page 3A

Girl found safe after search

Jeff Murray
Elmira Star-Gazette
USA TODAY NETWORK

A Tioga County girl who was reported missing Monday, Oct. 5 is safe, but authorities are not yet releasing much information about her disappearance or recovery.

Amelia B. Lawrence, 8, of Nichols, was reported missing after she was last seen walking on Lower Briggs Hollow Road in the Town of Nichols, Tioga County at 5:30 p.m. Monday.

Her disappearance sparked a major search led by the Tioga County Sheriff's Office, and including the Nichols Fire Department, New York State Department of Environmental Conservation forest rangers, Tioga County Emergency Services, and many volunteers and members of the public.

Wednesday morning, the sheriff's office announced Amelia had been found alive and safe at around 1:40 a.m. in the Town of Nichols.

The news release didn't specify who found her or where in the town she was located.

The sheriff's office also didn't release any additional information about the circumstances surrounding Amelia's disappearance, except to say the investigation is continuing and criminal charges are expected. The news release didn't indicate who is facing charges.

A missing person alert posted on the state Division of Criminal Justice Services website was canceled.

America 250 events planned at museum

Beth McDermott
Binghamton Press & Sun Bulletin
USA TODAY NETWORK

The Chenango County Historical Society will mark New York's fall "Path Through History" weekend Oct. 10 with presentations, exhibits and activities tied to the 250th anniversary of the nation's founding.

The museum's program will include interactive presentations by the Chenango Canal Association and the Chenango Valley Amateur Radio Association, according to a community announcement. Activities are scheduled at the Chenango County Historical Society museum and will focus on local history and the broader story of the United States.

From 10 a.m. to noon, the Otselic Valley Fishing & Heritage Association will present "From Turtle Island to Independence Hall: America's Fight for Liberty and Justice for All." During the program, Oneida Indian Nation storyteller Ron Patterson will share the Creation Story and answer questions

See MUSEUM, Page 6A

