A large group of volunteers gathered May 21 at Alliance City Cemetery to honor fallen military veterans and those who died while in service to their country.

The annual effort sends Carnation City residents out with groups of American flags that they place at individual graves, offering a special reflection. Those taking part receive direction for where to place the flags, depending on whether the serviceman or woman is buried alone, with a spouse, or with a spouse who also is a veteran.

The effort is led by the Alliance Memorial Day Committee, which also plans events on the holiday at the cemetery.

Some of the plants that make familiar landscapes recognizable may not survive by century's end as climate change becomes an increasingly important driver of species loss, according to scientists, reshaping and often shrinking suitable habitats that the plants need to survive.

CANTON – In a campaign stop in Stark County, Amy Acton promised she'd fight to make life more affordable for Ohioans.

"I am running for governor because people in this state are struggling," she said. "They are doing everything right, they are working harder than they have ever worked but there is no more breathing room."

If elected, Acton said she'd fund public schools, support labor unions and improve access to health care.

A crowd of over 600 Acton supporters filled the Canton Memorial Civic Center on May 22 for the "Workers for Acton Rally."

The event, which was organized with the Canton Professional Educators' Association and local labor unions, drew a crowd of mostly schoolteachers downtown.

Acton is a doctor and public health official. She's the Democratic candidate for Ohio governor and will face Republican Vivek Ramaswamy in November.
