

ALL-STAR MOMENT

TRAIL BLAZERS FORWARD DENI AVDIJA WAS REWARDED FOR HIS EXCEPTIONAL FIRST HALF OF THE SEASON BY BEING NAMED TO THE ALL-STAR TEAM FOR THE FIRST TIME IN HIS CAREER. B1

GAME DAY PARTY

WHEN PREPPING YOUR HOME FOR SUPER BOWL LX, IT'S IMPORTANT TO HAVE A GAME PLAN. TODAY WE'VE GOT ALL THE TIPS, TRICKS AND RECIPES TO MAKE YOUR PARTY A WINNER. C1

SPORTS APPAREL GIANT

Voice of Indonesia labor movement now relies on donations to survive

Cicah Sukaesih in her bedroom in Banten, Indonesia, in December. Cicah's fight against sweatshop conditions in the 1990s helped spark reform, but she paid a personal price. Photos by Muhammad Fadli, for ProPublica Cicah Sukaesih led fellow Indonesian workers in a strike in the '90s, part of a movement that led Nike to improve factory conditions.

Matthew Kish The Oregonian/OregonLive

Once a month, American labor activist Jim Keady logs into Remitly, an app for transferring money abroad, at his New Jersey home and sends $100 to a former Nike factory worker in Indonesia.

Cicah Sukaesih helped bring the world's attention to the lives of the young women in poor countries who made sneakers in the 1990s, first by organizing a strike and later by marching onto Nike's bucolic corporate campus in Oregon to demand a meeting with co-founder Phil Knight.

Her story — at a time of police and military harassment of labor organizers abroad — caught the attention of The New York Times and other news organizations. It also helped inform a generation of workers about their rights.

"She helped to birth, I would argue, the Indonesian trade union movement within Nike's supplier factories," Keady said.

But media attention and accolades don't pay the bills. Cicah had trouble finding work

Cicah during a visit to the United States to campaign for improvements in the labor practices of Nike suppliers.

following her 1990s activism. (Cicah prefers to go by one name. It's pronounced "Chee Chee.")

Decades after her crusade faded from the headlines, Keady and other labor organizers began sending Cicah money to keep her afloat. "She took a stand and she was a revolutionary," Keady said. "And she has nothing to show for it."

Now 62, Cicah welcomed a reporter for The Oregonian/OregonLive into her home last year, part of a reporting trip that included interviews with about 100 workers who make Nike sneakers, mostly in Indonesia, which was ground zero for the decade of sweatshop criticism that stained Nike's reputation in the 1990s.

ON OREGONLIVE

Indonesian wages: Nike says a typical factory worker at its overseas suppliers makes nearly double the minimum wage. But in Nike's second-largest production hub, workers said they make nothing near that. Read the story at bit.ly/4bF6Bvr.

Editor's note: These reports were produced in partnership with ProPublica, a nonprofit newsroom that investigates abuses of power.

Cicah said she's proud of the example she set by standing up to Nike. She said workers "became aware of their rights and aware of the law."

"Many things changed," she said.

The advocacy led to improvements, she said, including cracking down on child labor, installing better safety equipment and providing menstrual leave.

"Many of my friends," Cicah said, "became brave enough to speak up."

But she described her work as incomplete because problems linger, including chronically low wages.

SEE SPORTS APPAREL GIANT, A6

PUBLIC SAFETY

Homicides down 28% in Portland in 2025

Killings of Black Portlanders fell even more steeply than the overall decline.

Fedor Zarkhin The Oregonian/OregonLive

Homicides of Black Portlanders plunged in 2025 even more steeply than an overall decline in killings, falling to numbers not seen since before the pandemic.

Homicides in Portland dropped from 71 in 2024 to 51 in 2025, a 28% decline that reflected a nationwide downturn in violent crime. That brought last year's homicides to just below the level they hit in 2020, the pandemic year when homicides spiked.

The 12 Black Portlanders killed in 2025 represented the lowest number since 2019 — a 61% decrease from the 31 homicides of Black people in 2024 and a 300% decrease from 47 in 2022, the year homicides peaked in the city with 101 overall.

Less than 6% of Portlanders are Black, and they continue to face a disproportionate rate of homicides. In 2024, Black people accounted for 44% of all homicide victims in Portland; in 2025 the rate was 24%. SEE PUBLIC SAFETY, A8

ICE PROTESTS

Judge restricts federal use of tear gas, munitions

Temporary order lasts 14 days; next hearing set for March 2.

Maxine Bernstein The Oregonian/OregonLive

A federal judge on Tuesday issued a temporary order prohibiting federal officers at Portland's U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement building from directing tear gas, pepper balls, rubber bullets or other munitions at people unless they pose a direct and immediate threat.

"The Court finds that the repeated shooting and teargassing of nonviolent protesters at the Portland ICE Building will likely keep recurring," U.S. District Judge Michael H. Simon wrote in a 22-page opinion.

He noted that the "violence" by federal officers "is in no way isolated," adding: "Similarly, statements made by DHS SEE ICE PROTESTS, A2

MORE INSIDE

► Families describe 'safe, peaceful' protest before tear gas barrage at ICE. A4

Advice, D6 Classifieds, B9 Comics, D3 Life, C1 Obituaries, A9 Opinion, B11 Puzzles, D5 Sports, B1 Weather, B10 Copyright © 2026, Oregonian Publishing Co., Vol. 176, No. 59,523, 4 sections

Partly cloudy 61/45

Save Some Scratch

Friskies 48 ct Pate or Shreds Canned Cat Food is $31.99 after a $5 instant rebate!

BI-MART

Check out our Savings Book at bimart.com today!

