CAPROCK CHRONICLES

Kiowa Tribe thrived on the plains

Jack Becker
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

Editor's Note: Jack Becker, Librarian Emeritus, Texas Tech Libraries, is the editor of the Caprock Chronicles. He can be reached at jack.becker@ttu.edu. Quanah Parker and the Comanche Tribe have received extensive coverage in the Caprock Chronicles, so it is time to run a story on the Kiowa, their closest ally.

Like most plains Indians, the Kiowa led a nomadic life following the buffalo, which they hunted on horseback.

The buffalo furnished the Kiowa the food they ate, the clothes they wore, and the hides for the teepees they lived in.
