

Younger people redefine 'American dream' vision

Concept is still alive, but goals are personal and less standardized, study says. In Money

Golfer J.J. Spaun looks to repeat U.S. Open triumph

Defending champ recalls last year's putt that made him an unlikely winner. In Sports

Billy Ray Cyrus talks bonding over music

Singer tells all about new album ("The Hill"), new love (actress Elizabeth Hurley) and new level of bonding with family (Miley). In Life

USA TODAY

THE NATION'S NEWS | $3 | THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 2026

JEFF SPICER/GETTY IMAGES

Trump: Force in Iran still an option

If final deal not sealed, 'we go back to bombing'

Jeanine Santucci, Francesca Chambers, Zachary Schermele and Michael Loria
USA TODAY

President Donald Trump said that if Iran does not agree to a long-lasting peace deal in 60 days, the United States will resume its military campaign.

"It's a memorandum of understanding," Trump said as he addressed journalists at the conclusion of a Group of Seven summit. "If it doesn't get done in 60 days, that's all right, we go back to bombing."

Trump said an interim agreement would be signed at a ceremony this week before a second phase of negotiations takes place.

He said the preliminary agreement "achieves everything" the United States set out to accomplish in the war "and much more."

The declaration came hours after a copy of the draft agreement with Iran began circulating at the meeting for the world's most advanced economies.

Ahead of his remarks, CNN and Bloomberg published drafts of the

See IRAN, Page 2A

Tennessee law requires government agencies report those unlawfully in the United States to ICE if they are receiving government benefits.

CHARLY TRIBALLEAU/AFP VIA GETTY IMAGES

Tennessee law mandates sick immigrant kids reported to ICE

Beth Warren and Vivian Jones
Nashville Tennessean
USA TODAY NETWORK

About 400 disabled immigrant children who are receiving lifesaving state-paid medical care will have their immigration status reported to ICE at the end of this month, because of a new Tennessee law drafted with input from the White House.

The Tennessee Department of Health Children's Special Services program is a "payer of last resort" that ensures access to lifesaving medical care for very low-income children who are not eligible for TennCare. The program is open to people age 21 and younger with disabilities and chronic illnesses like cystic fibrosis, cancer and spina bifida.

See TENNESSEE, Page 3A

©COPYRIGHT 2026 USA TODAY, A division of USA TODAY Co., Inc.

HOME DELIVERY 1-800-872-0001, USATODAYSERVICE.COM

Clockwise from top right: Rep. Ritchie Torres, state Sen. Shevrin Jones and Elijah Manley. PHOTOS BY GETTY IMAGES, ELIJAH MANLEY FOR CONGRESS, KEVIN R. WEXLER/USA TODAY NETWORK, REUTERS; ILLUSTRATION BY ALAN NGUYEN/USA TODAY

Black gay men seek a voice in Congress

Jay Stahl USA TODAY

Three Democratic candidates have an eye on history

The struggle for political influence comes as states' redistricting battles have eroded the power of Black voters

This fall, a 27-year-old Black gay man named Elijah Manley is the best-funded challenger to 20-year veteran Rep. Debbie Wasserman Schultz, D-Florida, who is facing the political fight of her life to remain in Congress. • At 59, Wasserman Schultz, a straight White woman, raised eyebrows when she opted to run in Florida's 20th Congressional District, where a majority of residents are Black, after her state's Republican-led Legislature redrew her Broward County district, eliminating her seat. • "This district can make history," Manley told USA TODAY. "We can make history here, electing the youngest member of Congress, a gay man – the first from Florida – a Black gay man."

Wasserman Schultz said in a statement that she was focused on the needs of the district and aimed "to deliver resources to the people of Broward who know and trust me and want me to keep up this critical fight for our families against Trump's high-cost, corrupt agenda."

The primary battle to replace scandal-plagued former Rep. Sheila Cherfilus-McCormick, who is running again for the seat, mirrors a national trend as young, progressive challengers seek upsets against aging House incumbents.

Manley, Florida state Sen. Shevrin Jones – widely considered the front-runner to replace Rep. Frederica Wilson – and U.S. Rep. Ritchie Torres are among a trio of Black gay

See BLACK VOTE, Page 3A

Detective uses wit to chew into cold cases

Gum ruse leads to guilty plea in old murder cases

Amanda Lee Myers
USA TODAY

Detective Susan Logothetti used a chewing gum ruse to trap a killer. PROVIDED BY EVERETT POLICE DEPARTMENT

Deep down, Detective Susan Logothetti knew she was knocking on the front door of a killer.

Undercover and on a risky mission, she stood on his doorstep that drizzly January day in Olympia, Washington, thinking how unlikely it was that her plan would nab him. Logothetti held her breath as she saw the prime suspect, Mitchell Gaff, walking toward her. He opened the door.

Having read his lengthy case file, Logothetti knew the horrors that Gaff was capable of inflicting. He had committed some of the most violent rapes she had come across in her seven years as a detective with the Everett Police Department, just north of Seattle. Now, for the first time, he was strongly suspected of committing a cold-case murder that was over four decades old.

Logothetti didn't flinch. She introduced herself to Gaff using a false name and a ruse that sounds straight out of a Hollywood crime series. Logothetti and two other detectives were at Gaff's house posing as chewing gum

See COLD CASES, Page 6A