USA TODAY NETWORK – WISCONSIN

The Green Bay Packers will highlight the Packers vs. Cancer campaign during the Oct. 18 game against the Dallas Cowboys at Lambeau Field.

Throughout October, the Packers partner with UW Health | Carbone Cancer Center to raise awareness for all cancers and support cancer research. Fans will receive a Packers vs. Cancer Roll-a-Banner. The game will incorporate game entertainment elements that honor cancer survivors and their loved ones. This is the 10th year of Packers vs. Cancer.

The Packers play the Cowboys at 7:20 p.m. Oct. 18 in a “Sunday Night Football” game.

Normal October weather expected for Cowboy’s game

Sunday’s forecast by the National Weather Service is sunny with a high near 63 during the day. At night, the forecast is for partly cloudy and a low of 45. Those are average temperatures for mid-October.

Genrich explains why he didn’t seek reelection

Jesse Lin
Green Bay Press-Gazette
USA TODAY NETWORK – WISCONSIN

Green Bay Mayor Eric Genrich said he would welcome the chance to serve in a future Democratic governor’s administration and expressed wishes for a career in public policy after declining to run again for mayor.

Genrich on Oct. 1 announced his decision not to run for reelection. He did not elaborate at the time, but met with the media on Oct. 14 at City Hall.

In his first public remarks about his decision, Genrich said he was “definitely considering positions” in public policy, adding that his interest lay at the state and local levels of government.

He said he was unlikely to run for any elected position again, although he did not rule out the possibility.

Genrich said he didn’t have any conversations with Democratic candidate David Crowley about possibly serving in a future governor’s administration, but left the door open. “If there’s an opportunity to serve that, you know, fits with my skillset, I certainly would consider something like that,” Genrich said.

Asked if he had interest in a specific job in the state’s administration, Genrich said, “I’m not sure that I’m prepared to state anything specifically, but, again, if there’s an opportunity to help the people of Green Bay and the state of Wisconsin, certainly open to Keep May 4, 2027, open on your calendar if you’re a Zach Bryan fan.

The multi-platinum “Something in the Orange” and “Pink Skies” singer will play Lambeau Field for a tour that will take him to NFL stadiums across the country. The Green Bay stop on the Young Manhood and Other Donatable Organs Tour is set for 7 p.m. Tuesday, May 4.

John Fogerty, a founding member and the lead singer of Creedence Clearwater Revival, and folk singer-songwriter Fey Fili will be the support acts.

The general on-sale for tickets is 10 a.m. Oct. 23, according to the Ticketmaster website. An artist presale from 10 a.m. Oct. 21 to 10 p.m. Oct. 22 and a local presale from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Oct. 22 are also listed. Fans can register for the artist presale at zachbryan-presale.com.

Ticket prices have not been announced. There will be an eight-ticket limit per person or credit card.

Zach Bryan recently set the all-time attendance record at Gillette Stadium

It will be Bryan’s first performance in Green Bay and the second consecutive year for a May concert at Lambeau Field. Country singer Luke Combs played back-to-back nights at the Green Bay Packers stadium May 15-16, playing to 92,540 on his My Kinda Saturday Night Tour.

For Fogerty fans who were disappointed when a 2020 stop on his My 50
